Hello, Phillip!

I love how you write your emails, with a Texas accent:). It's so cool that you are able to understand Spanish as well as Portuguese. I'm so sorry I missed emailing you in time for your last P-day. I guess I figured you would have your P-day the day after, which would be Friday, rather than the day before. However, it was wonderful to hear from you! I'll make this email fairly short, then write a longer letter to send by snail mail.

I guess I can give you five news things in the email:

1. We received your package. Thank you! I'll talk more about it in detail in the letter I send.
2. Mike Scott is in Peru now. He left the day before Thanksgiving, and I'll include a print-out of his email.
3. Ian Schow finished NaNoWriMo. Good for him! He also posted this exciting news on his Facebook: "Dear Elder Schow,...You are assigned to labor in the Belgium/Netherlands Mission...on February 23, 2011."
4. I talked to Barb Ryan on the phone the other day, for about an hour and a half. (She is the one who made you capes when you were little.) She said to say "hello" to you, and asked if you still wear capes! She is being treated for ovarian cancer, and has one last round of chemo. She has no hair, she said. But she is sounding well, and sounded upbeat and positive.
5. Sis. Blanchette is expecting . . . twins!

Well, how's that for news? I'll write more details of some of these things. I love you and I miss you a lot, and we pray for you each day, Phillip. Maybe one of these days soon I can be on the computer as you are sending your email so we can send back and forth for a few minutes. That would be cool!

Time to get totally ready for church. Say "hola!" to the people in your branch for me :).
I love you.

Love,
Mom
