

John Larsen <theclaw56@gmail.com>

Hello, Elder Larsen!

Joyce Larsen <linenLady9@larsen-family.us>

Thu, Jan 13, 2011 at 9:53 AM

To: phillip.larsen@myldsmail.net

Cc: john@larsen-family.us

Hello, My Dear Elder Larsen!

The first thing I thought of when I read your email is: Did you mess with Texas?! Is that why you're in NM? (Just a little joke :) How are you liking Hobbs now? I think it's so neat that you're getting to know many areas, and you like things about them all. And when you get to Brazil it will be even more so, more new people, customs and such to learn and to love.

Have you spoken any German to Milla? I bet she would like that.

Why are you using Elder Smart's bike? What is Elder Smart using? I'm glad someone had gloves for you to borrow. What will happen to the ones you left in Midland? Maybe they will be used by another Elder who needs them.

Thank you for your comments on Ether 12. I'm going to be talking a bit about faith on Sunday at Stake Conference, and I think your insights will be helpful for my talk. So, thank you

Ok, Dad and I just got back from the gym, my first day to use it. It was fun! Julia had no school yesterday because of the snow (20" is what we measured. Oh, that reminds me, I think the yardstick is still in the yard.) Then today she has another snow day. There are too many sidewalks that are not passable, which is why they are closing the schools today. BG is also closed, and Infant Jesus, but the others (Hudson, Hollis-Brookline, etc) are open today. I think we got more snow, plus it's just not cleaned up enough yet.

More later. I'm off to the fun of having periodontal surgery. I'll send this now, then write more later. This way, you'll at least hear a little from me!

Love you!

Mom